Artemide Huara LED Table Lamp

The Huara table lamp was designed by Elemental, a design Do Tank that was founded in 2001. Wanting to make the most of LED technology and electronics, this table light takes inspiration from the history of light and the role it has played for humankind across millennia. Before we even discovered fire, humanity used the stars and the natural light cycle to navigate. Now, in the modern day, we have access to extremely intelligent lighting solutions, using technology to diversify spaces.

The Huara table light is a testament to this transformation, paying homage to darkness and light with an interactive design. The table lamp is divided into geometric sections, with each one lighting up as you touch it to create your own unique display of light and dark. The Huara is also compatible with the Artemide App, so you can control it wirelessly via Bluetooth on a smart device, and it features a USB port so you can handily charge your devices.

The Huara LED table light is aptly named after the Aymarà word for star. The Aymarà are the native community of the Atacama Desert, which is the darkest and driest desert in the world. Here, we can see stars beyond our wildest dreams, taking in the true beauty of natural light.
