LYFA Mosaik Pendant Light

The Mosaik pendant light is a simple yet classic design by Bent Karlby, who is widely regarded today as one of Denmark's most productive and versatile lighting designers of the 20th century. The iconic shade uses a bold conical shape that allows for a wide beam of direct light to flood downwards, ideal for a dining space or above a kitchen counter. At the time of its release in 1959, the Mosaik was a bold and playful piece of lighting design intended for the modern home. This is still the case today as its contemporary style and bold silhouette make a key statement in any space. Available in either white or black finishes, the Mosaik also features solid brass detailing that is brought to life within the monochrome design. This brass detailing is also highlighted by the open-topped shade. This small design feature allows for a small outpouring of light to escape from the top of the shade and onto the brass tubing. This brings a glistening and glamorous touch to the simple design and instantly elevates the LYFA pendant, which is available in three sizes.
