PRODUCT DESCRIPTION

Designer: Poul Henningsen

Louis Poulsen PH Artichoke Pale Rose Pendant

The Louis Poulsen PH Artichoke Pale Rose Pendant comes from the original design of the PH Artichoke, which was designed in 1958 by Poul Henningsen. The original was created for a modernist restaurant, where it still hangs today. The Artichoke gets its name from its distinctive shape, constructed by 72 leaves that are carefully hand-mounted onto its frame. These leaves provide a diffused and inviting glow, while ensuring glare-free light from every angle. These leaves are made from laser-cut brushed stainless steel that illuminate the fixture and emit diffused light with a unique pattern.

Whether illuminated or not, the PH Artichoke Pale Rose Pendant is a beautiful statement piece wherever it is installed. Its modern, sleek design fits seamlessly into commercial spaces such as restaurants or bars. Within the home, the warm and diffused glow is perfect for creating ambient lighting in a bedroom or living room, or used to create a statement hanging above a dining table.
