Artemide Mezzachimera Table Lamp

The Artemide Mezzachimera Table Lamp is the younger sibling of the now-retired Chimera Floor Lamp. Formed of a methacrylate diffuser with a silk-like fabric effect, like the folding created by thin, delicate drapes. Designed by Vico Magistretti in the 1970s, this lamp emits a soft and diffused light, while the folds create a game of shadows onto the diffuser itself, highlighting the curves. The result is an eye-catching design that replicates a piece of art.

The Mezzachimera lamp can be used on the floor as well as the table and makes an artistic statement even when not in use. The elegant white finish can blend into a range of contemporary interiors and is an intriguing way to illuminate living rooms, bedrooms, hallways and dining spaces.
