Artemide

Mezzachimera by Artemide

The Mezzachimera table lamp is the younger sibling of the now retired Chimera floor lamp. With a methacrylate diffuser with a silk-like fabric affect, like the folding created by thin, delicate drapes. The lamp was designed by Vico Magistretti in the 1970s and was distributed by Artemide in the late 1990s. The lamp emits a soft and diffused light, while the folds create a game of shadows onto the diffuser itself, highlighting the curves. Mezzachimera can be used both as a table and a floor lamp and makes an artistic statement even when not in use.
