Lampe Gras No. 216 Wall Light by DCW éditions

The Lampe Gras 216 wall lamp is part of the DCW éditions Lampe Gras collection, a series of lights that were first developed by Bernard-Albin Gras in 1921. The designer wanted to create lights that were suitable for industrial and office environments, putting function at the forefront of design. What followed was a lighting range that was acclaimed in the design world, getting the attention and admiration from prominent 20th century designers.

The Lampe Gras No. 216 wall lamp lives up to this legacy, with full adjustability and vintage style. The lampshade can be angled up to 210° and is supported by an arm that can be moved up, down and side to side. The perpendicular arm can also be rotated around 120° so you can direct the light exactly where you need. The supporting stem is positioned on the wall by a fixture that allows you to move the lamp up and down, giving you limitless possibilities. Suitable as a reading/task light or for ambience, this wall light is best used by beds, sofas, seating areas and next to tables due to its versatile movement and effective glow.

This wall lamp comes with a cable and plug so needs to be installed near a socket. It is also available as part of the Le Mobilier de Gras Plug & Dream and Plug & Work products which combine the No. 216 light with a built in table suitable for bedsides and for working.
