Verpan Moon Pendant

The Verpan Moon Pendant is one of Verner Panton's earliest lighting designs. Its sculptural form is defined by ten ring-shaped lamellae arranged around a central light source for a striking fan-like silhouette that changes appearance depending on the viewing angle. Finished in clean white lacquered metal, the pendant brings a sense of movement and balance to dining rooms, living spaces, and bedrooms.

Designed to softly reflect and filter light, the Moon Pendant provides a comfortable, ambient and glare-free glow while maintaining a bold visual presence. The layered blades can be adjusted to vary the expression and light distribution, allowing the pendant to shift from an enclosed, moon-like form to a more open and dynamic composition. Timeless yet playful, the Moon Pendant captures Panton's distinctive approach to shape, atmosphere and function, making it a refined statement piece for both classic and contemporary interiors.
