Marset Piola LED Pendant Light

The Piola pendant aims to imitate the endless movement and fluidity of a spiraling ribbon. This infinite movement is emulated by the 5 meters of spiraling, laminated metal band that encompasses the light source. The way in which this Marset pendant is designed is so that several different forms of light are produced. The designer Joan Gaspar describes the types of light that are produced as 'direct downward light, indirect reflected light, and light that sneaks between the edges of the spiral'.

This lamp provides a different face at every angle as well as a different light output with every turn. This design takes a break from the usual straight lines and simplicity, its curved edges and homey glow gives this light a welcoming feel.
