HAY Nelson Saucer Bubble Pendant

The HAY Nelson Saucer Bubble Pendant was designed by American designer George Nelson in 1947. Nelson created the modernist design after attempting to source some silk-covered Swedish lamps for his office. He found that these lamps were too expensive, making them unobtainable for many people. This inspired him to create a more affordable lighting solution, crafted from polymer webbing used by the U.S. military.

Despite its large form, the HAY Nelson Saucer Bubble Pendant appears lightweight and versatile, creating the illusion of floating in midair. The opaque shade diffuses light, emitting a soft glow that bathes the surrounding room in a comfortable atmosphere. This warm lighting paired with the pendant's sculptural form makes it well-suited above a table in a dining room, living area, or office space.
