Foscarini Binic Table Lamp

The Foscarini Binic Table Lamp was designed by Ionna Vautrin and gets its name from a lighthouse on the coast of Brittany, the region of France where Vautrin comes from. In this area, the sea is of enormous importance to daily life and so, when Foscarini asked her to design a small, coloured table lamp, Ionna was inspired by the wind socks of ships. It is an object that she has always been curious about and has interpreted through her sensitivity and creativity, together with the Foscarini design team.

The Binic table light has a simple yet surprising architecture: the upper rounded volume with its shiny finish and the conical base appear to challenge the force of gravity and yet the light is perfectly stable, as the difference in weight is only visual. This table light is ideal as a present or a personal object of desire - with its packaging which is just as special and fun!
